Generic Programming

Writing reusable functions which work for many different data types

By exploiting common structure between different data types

Which functions can we derive just by knowing the structure of a data type?